Active issues were quiet and steady in the pre-holiday New York stock market today. Bridgeport and American Telephone sold at new highs. Tails in prices after being soft at the start. U. S. ARMS CUT PLAN REJECTED BY ITALY

Rome, Feb. 21 (I.N.S.).—Italy's reply to President Coolidge's disarmament proposals, which was handed to Ambassador Fletcher today, declares that Italy does not feel it possible to agree to arrest and limit her own defenses while others are enabled to increase their armaments.

Italy also states that she cannot disassociate the interdependency of land and sea armaments.

This note is couched in soft diplomatic phraseology and might leave the way open for further proposals, but like the French note, it is considered here as a tantamount to flat rejection.

HAPPY HOME LETTERS PROVE BIG STIMULUS

Have you joined the Boston Evening American's discussion of the subject, WHAT MAKES THE HOME HAPPY? WHAT MAKES IT UNHAPPY?

Could there possibly be a more vital or interesting topic?

Read in another column the extremely interesting and very well written letter to the writer of which is awarded our first ten dollar honorarium.

"A happy home," this young matron tells us, "is a home where things really worth while—love, affection, understanding, honesty, kindness and tolerance—are valued, and the things-that-money-can-buy, are not overestimated."

2,000 Stage Riot in Rush for Snow Jobs

Police reserves from Station 5, East Dedham street, were rushed to the city yards in Albany street, opposite East Newton street, today, when 2,00 men, seeking employment as snow-shovelers, battled for 200 jobs.

Cries of "Our families are starving. We want work," rent the air. The crowd extended down Albany street and for many blocks in East Newton street.

While 200 were given jobs at the yards, a group of 200 more stormed the City Council chambers on the fourth floor of City Hall seeking similar work.

"We want work!" they yelled in chorus.

Captain John J. Driscoll of Station 5 said: "We received a call for police. We were told that 2,000 persons had gathered at the city yards. I sent a detail of officers there to assist the men on the route."

At City Hall, William J. Walsh passed out working cards to 50 men. As fast as requisitions for more men were received, he sent others on jobs.

City Councillor George E. Gilbody of Dorchester piloted 87 men through the Dorchester district, succeeding in placing them at work for several contractors.

Commissioner James H. Sullivan and a corps of engineers toured the city, instructing contractors to clear the most traveled streets and streets where funerals were being held.

U. S. REFUGEES' FOOD SEIZED BY CHINESE

Washington, Feb. 21 (I.N.S.).—Food supplies aboard the American vessel Ipping, which has been carrying American refugees from the interior of China to Shanghai, were seized Saturday at Ichang, Consul-General Lockhart, at Hankow, reported to the State Department today.

The supplies were forcibly removed on the alleged grounds that there were British passengers aboard.

Lockhart also reported that a general strike has been called at Ichang, which is a Yangtze River port about 600 miles inland. There are about 200 Americans there.

An anti-British boycott has been established and pickets are being employed to stop all British goods.

90 Chinese Strike Rioters Beheaded

Shanghai, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The sword, wielded swiftly to behead strike fomenters, was used in the native section of Shanghai today to combat the pen of nationalist propaganda.

Reliable Chinese sources placed the number of beheadings at 25, of which 16 were carried out today, while the nationalists declared that there had been 90.

SHIPS AGROUND IN BAY; NEW STORM IS COMING

Twenty persons are dead in the East in the furious three days' storm of rain, snow, sleet and savage gales. Of these deaths, thirteen are in New England.

Another snowstorm is reported due in Boston tonight.

Along the Cape Cod shore, where eight brave men lost their lives fighting gamely but futilely against a driving gale and mountainous seas, saddened comrades in the Coast Guard were seeking six missing bodies today.

SHE'S A BEAUTY, BUT 'JUSTICE IS BLIND'

Florence Collins of Tremont street won the distinction today of being picked as the most beautiful woman ever to appear in Municipal Court, but it didn't save her from being held in $2,000 on a shoplifting charge.

In default of the bail she was sent to the House of Detention to await a hearing March 1.

Miss Collins, who gave Astor street as her address when arrested Saturday by Traffic Officer James Blue, brought a gasp of admiration from the court spectators when she swept in to the room and smiled dazzlingly.

According to the probation officer, she has served a sentence at Sherborn and is now on probation.

MORE SNOW DUE TONIGHT IN WAKE OF GALE THAT KILLED 20

BODIES OF LOST CREW HUNTED

Four Coast Guard warrant officers went to Provincetown today to conduct an inquest into the loss of the patrol boat and its crew. They will attempt to learn the name of a steamer that is said to have passed the Coast Guard craft without responding to its distress signals.

Besides the smashed-to-pieces Coast Guard boat CG238, there are at least six other vessels ashore along the Massachusetts coast, two of them, a schooner and a barge, in Boston harbor.

SHIPS GROUND IN HARBOR.

While eight men died in the turbulent sea off outer Peaked Hill Bar, Cape Cod, more died on land in the Bay State. Five persons are dead in Pittsburgh, one in South Amboy, N. J., and one aboard Ambrose Lightship off New York.

Many vessels and barges were reported in distress from Eastport, Me., to the New Jersey shores, and Coast Guards all along the coast performed heroic rescue work.

An unidentified schooner is aground on Thompson's Island in Boston harbor, and a barge, the Waconisco, with coal from Reading, Pa., and Philadelphia is aground on Rainsford's Island after drifting from her moorings. The schooner Nancy is ashore at Surfside, Nantasket.

The Coast Guard destroyer Paulding, the crew of which made a gallant attempt to rescue the men aboard the CG 238, arrived at the Charlestown Navy Yard for repairs and officials estimated that $60,000 damage was done to the vessel by the storm.

It is believed that the bodies of the Coast Guardsmen drowned off Cape Cod, of which only two had thus far been recovered from the sea, will be washed ashore in a group lashed together to the same lifecart which is part of the equipment of every coast guard boat.

The death-dealing gale picked up the coast guard boat 238, clutched it from its anchors, and threw it upon the bar where her crew of eight men perished.

Today the battered hulk of the little patrol boat is being slowly driven into the inner bar at Peaked Hill.

TRAPPED IN HIGH SEAS.

Fate had allied itself with storm and wind to kill the men who had braved the storm in the performance of their duty.

Second only to the tragedy of the eight dead men was the grief of their fellow coast guardsmen at Provincetown, compelled to watch them die.

Time after time the coast guardsmen put out in their open surfboats in the effort at rescue, and time after time they were beaten back by wind and sea.

The men prayed that the wind might drive the 238 another quarter mile inshore to the inner bar, where the breeches-buoy could be brought into play.

But the eight men were doomed. And the storm's fury increased. If it might have saved their lives, but the wind was just strong enough to ride the craft on the outer bar without being sufficiently furious to drive it further toward shore.

The two bodies already washed ashore were identified as those of Raymond H. Clark, boatswain's mate first class, of No. 8 Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, and Charles A. Freeburn, boatswain's mate second class, of Philadelphia.

The bodies yet to be found are those of Boatswain Jesse K. Rivenback of Oak Bluffs, who was commanding the craft on his maiden trip; Chief Mechanic Mate Cornelius Shea of No. 99 Howard avenue, Roxbury, formerly of No. 11 Cordis street, Charlestown; Machinist's Mate Joseph V. Maxim of No. 195 Westville street, Dorchester; Clarence Alexander of No. 207 Henderson street, Greenville, S. C., cook, on the craft; Coxswain Leo S. Kryzanowski of No. 2409 North Laurel street, Chicago, and Fred C. McCausland of No. 15 South street, Portland.

The new storm due here tonight will be of much less intensity, according to the weather forecaster, who added that there are at least two more storm areas moving eastward.

Temperatures, which today hovered between 12 and 15, are due to continue low and there is no prospect of real fair weather for 36 hours.

Partly cloudy, cold and with northeast winds shifting to westerly, is the prediction for the holiday.

The schooner Nancy, ashore at Surfside, is as far up on the beach that there seems to be little prospect of its being floated. The vessel had attempted to ride out of the storm at the entrance to Hull Harbor, but the gale ripped it from its anchorage and tossed it ashore.

MADE THRILLING RESCUE.

Four captains of the Nantasket Beach Steamship Line, O. C. Olsen leading them, with eight other volunteers, dragged an emergency lifeboat to the surf and battled their way to the rescue. They worked the Nancy to shore and finally took off eight men and the ship's cat.

The Coast Guard patrol boat CG-241 is high and dry aground at Vineyard Haven, the crew having waded safely ashore. The dredger Lydia is ashore and breaking up in Provincetown Harbor. Two motor-driven fishing craft are on the rocks at Plymouth.

A coal barge is ashore off the Dodliveers' Neck Coast Guard station, Gloucester, and the steamship Lois Gorin was reported in peril off Cape Cod, but managing to hold her own with the storm.

The Cunarder Caronia rode out the gale off Nantucket and was to come into Boston today, twenty-four hours late, to pick up passengers for Europe. The Cunard line provided hotel accommodations for those forced to wait over for the liner's arrival.

Streets in Winthrop from Grant Spray to the Winthrop Beach section were flooded for the third time with the rising tide today and cellars were deep in water, with fires out.

Traffic could not move through the cross streets between Shirley street and the Shore drive.

Breiles sea walls and boulevards were reported all along the North and South Shores, with the surf attracting thousands to witness its spectacular pounding and leaping.

General John J. Pershing started for Exeter, N. H., to visit his son at the height of the storm, but was forced to surrender to the elements and return to Boston. General Mark L. Hersey was with him.

A strange feature of the tragedy of the sea was the premonition of death that came to the mother of one of the victims.

Mrs. Joseph Maxim of No. 100 Westville street, Dorchester, dreamed of her son drowning, almost exactly as he was drowned. She told members of her family that in her dream she had seen the boy struggling in the water, finally going down to his death.

KILLED BY A TAXICAB.

One land victim of the tempest was Richard F. Berry of No. 132 Broadway, Malden, who stepped in front of a taxicab nearly at his door and was instantly killed. He had been blinded by the snow.

In Quincy, William Rosch, operator of a city snow plow, was so exhausted by the struggle against the storm he collapsed and died later at Quincy Hospital.

Charles S. Candy of Montreal died of cold and exposure after he was found unconscious in the railway of a lodging house in Columbus avenue, South End.

Mother Collapses at News of Son's Death on Cutter

Philadelphia, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Anna Freeburn collapsed when she learned of the death of her son, Charles A. Freeburn, member of the crew of eight who lost their lives when the Coast Guard cutter No. 238 was dashed to pieces on the beach at Provincetown, Mass.

"If he is gone, I want to go, too," she cried, and slumped to the floor. A physician was called and she was revived.

George Freeburn, her husband, said their son was Mrs. Freeburn's chief interest in life. Last Friday, on his birthday, Mrs. Freeburn had sent her son a gift to Boston and expected him to come home on a furlough. Thinking it was her son, she answered the call at the door last night when news of his death came.

N. H. Plowing Out as Snow Falls; Relief for Sanbornton

Concord, N. H., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Snow continued to fall today, adding to the blanket of 10 to 12 inches that covered this section of the State Saturday and Sunday. Eighteen plows rolled over the 710 miles of the southern division of the Boston & Maine Railroad throughout the night to keep the rails cleared.

A large force of men was employed to open switches. Main highways were being kept open by tractors and horse-drawn plows, but many side roads were impassable.

Residents of Sanbornton were snowed in today. Tractor plows were being used to break open the road leading into town from Laconia, a distance of about seven miles. The United States Weather Bureau here announced more snow was expected tonight.

Charlestown Mourns for Native Son Lost in Wreck

Charlestown was grieving today over the loss of a native son and hero in the wreck of Patrol Boat 238 in the wild gale off Cape Cod's tip. Cornelius Shea, 28, a chief motor machinist's mate, lived with his mother, Mrs. Sarah Jane Shea, at No. 8 Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, and the big, good-natured, red-headed guardsman had intended leaving the service in two weeks.

Every man, woman and child in Charlestown who knew him loved "Connie" of the booming voice and kindly heart, and there was many a tear shed over his fate in the roaring surf off Highland Light.

PAULDING CREW BATTLES DEATH IN CAPE GALE

The Coast Guard destroyer Paulding, whose gallant crew made a superhuman effort to rescue the crew of the ill-fated CG238 at the height of the storm, limped into Charlestown Navy Yard today badly crippled as a result of the terrific pounding of the mountainous seas which swept her decks as she fought to reach the side of the doomed patrol boat.

The Pauldings crew of 91, exhausted by the struggle which began early Saturday evening when news of the patrol boat's plight was flashed to her as she rode at anchor in President Roads, stood by as the vessel warped to her pier and set about repairing the damage which the seas had inflicted.

Navy yard officials placed the damage at $60,000. The No. 1 smokestack, carried away while the Paulding was 120 miles northeast of Boston, left a gaping hole amidships, and it was feared the seas rushing over her decks might swamp the boilers. Forced draught from the engine room kept her boilers clear until the crew fought their way on deck and battened down the opening.

Surf boats, sounding machine and the small antennae were swept over early Sunday morning, and by noon the afterdecks had been stripped clean of all her gear. Five gas tanks lashed to the aftermast were carried away, and as the giant smokestack came crashing to the deck the crew, with life belts wrapped around them, struggled to save the remaining stacks.

Robert Hoyle, first class seaman, rigged up tackle to brace the weakening stacks and had just completed the task and descended to the deck when William Eggeberg, who had been helping him, was washed overboard by a giant combar.

Hoyle seized a line, heaved it to his mate and hauled him back to safety.

Lieutenant-Commander John S. Baylis, commander of the Paulding, declared that only by a miracle did his crew survive the storm without loss of life.

Flip of Coin Saves One, Dooms Other in Cape Tragedy

The flip of a coin sent one man to his death aboard the wrecked Coast Guard patrol boat 238 and saved the life of another man.

Both men, T. J. Comerford and Raymond Henry Clark of Dorchester, wanted to make the trip, believing that rough seas would make it a voyage to talk about. Both were assigned to the boat but only one could make this trip.

"Well, let's toss a coin," Comerford said.

"All right," replied Clarke. And Comerford tossed.

"Tails," Clarke cried and tails it was. Comerford stayed behind and the next day was transferred to another vessel, while Clarke sailed to his death.

Patrol Boat 151 Reaches Hub, Disabled, After a Rough Trip

The Coast Guard patrol boat 151, which was doing duty with the ill-fated CG-238, returned to Boston in the midst of the howling blizzard with one of her engines disabled.

Chief Boatswain Tebo, bringing in the CG-151, encountered such rough seas, even in the inner harbor, that he feared the vessel would be swamped. He had been out of touch with the 238, but believed she was running in either just ahead of his craft or just behind.

INQUIRY MADE ON WRECK OF PATROL BOAT

A board of inquiry, made up of three men, was formed today to inquire into the wrecking and loss of the Patrol Boat 238 off Highland Light, Cape Cod.

The big point of inquiry was whether Commander Rivenback, on his first sea trip as a commanding officer, was perhaps over-zealous in remaining out when the storm got bad and coastwise vessels had been warned of its continuance.

Commander Rivenback took his boat out Wednesday and was due back some time Saturday, according to information at the Coast Guard base in East Boston.

Another point in the inquiry will involve the passing of several craft near the wrecked patrol boat and the failure of these passing craft to heed distress signals—if they saw them.

The inquiry board was made up of Dr. Robert W. Power, Boatswain Philip H. Waldron and Machinist George E. Allston.

Pittsfield, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The Berkshire trail, the main highway between Dalton and Northampton, is closed because of the heavy fall of snow, followed by drifting.

The Pittsfield-Albany State road is virtually closed, although one or two automobiles have with difficulty managed to get over Lebanon mountain. Snow started falling here again today.

FINED $5 EACH FOR 'BOOZE' ON TRAINS

St. Albans, Vt., Feb. 21 (A.P.)—Between thirty and forty Montreal-to-Boston sleeping Pullman passengers whose names will be given hearings before an immigration board here today for discovering their American citizenship. They were taken from a Montreal train last night when they failed to show documentary proof of citizenship.

The government is also richer through the collection of many $5 penalties for "pocket bootlegging." Customs officers on the New York excursion train found nearly 200 bottles of hard liquor that was shuttled and pass bottles with no apparent owners. Those who admitted ownership were not prosecuted, but penalties of $5 each followed.

Ten special excursion trains have been operated by the Central Vermont Railway over the week-end from New York and Boston to Montreal. The last of the southbound special leaves Montreal tonight.

Railway officials say every precaution is taken to guard against passengers' detention, advertising matter and even tickets bearing the notation that passengers must have documentary proof of citizenship to return to the United States. Those who are detained here will be held until their friends send proof to the special board which is to hear them.

It is expected the majority will be released by night, as glaring mistakes affecting American citizenship of those detained are beginning to appear.

HUSBAND NOT A BIGAMIST, SAYS SIMMS GIRL

Portland, Me., Feb. 21 (A.P.)—Information that Herman A. Yaffee, or Kenyon A. Stoddard, as he was known in Dayton, Ohio, apparently was legally married in Philadelphia ten years ago to Edith Louise White of Cousins Island, Me., was obtained today from William H. Gulliver, Mrs. Yaffee's attorney. Gulliver said that even after Yaffee had been secretly married to Miss Charlotte Simms, Dayton society girl, in Newport, Ky., last October, he called upon Mrs. Yaffee and sought to dissuade her from divorce proceedings.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (A.P.)—Charlotte Simms, Dayton society girl, will remarry Kenyon Antony Stoddard "as soon as his first marriage is legally dissolved," in the event that her marriage to him was illegitimate, Mrs. Herald Ensley Simms quoted her as having said at Clearwater, Fla.

Miss Simms' marriage to Stoddard at Newport, Ky., last October became known even after a report postponed when Stoddards was portrayed with a companion in a "co-respondent" suit. The suit was brought by Edith Virginia Yaffee, who charged that she married Stoddard under the name of Herman Albrecht Yaffee in 1919.

In addition to the interview received from Florida, the newspaper says Mrs. Simms following letter received here from Miss Simms:

"There was no subsequent. My parents were cognizant of the secret marriage and approved Mr. Stoddard. Mr. Stoddard believes he is innocent of any previous marriage and is doing his utmost to clear the situation.

"He resides for some years with the Yaffees and adopted their name for his profession as commercial artist. We have no plans for the future as yet."

Charles H. Simms, father of the girl, announced at Dayton Saturday that he would prosecute his son-in-law if it was proved that the latter became a bigamist in the Newport marriage.

Mrs. Mary Heath McGraw, former "Follies" girl, learned from the Providence Superior Court today that the divorce she obtained there from Howard A. McGraw, Detroit millionaire, is legal and that the fortune his will left to his wife may not be hers. She endeavored to have the decree set aside as a "divorce will" suit.

EVANGELIST IS CHEERED BY NEW YORK

By MICHELINE KEATING
Universal Service Correspondent

New York, Feb. 21.—Aimee McPherson was the Devil's prey. Lucifer was jealous of her and tried to ruin her. She says so herself.

Before 1,500 persons jammed into every corner of the Good Tidings Tabernacle in West 23d street, with hundreds of others braving the rain and sleet outside to listen to the broadcasting loud speakers fastened above the doors, and thousands of radio fans tuned in on the story, Aimee, with much gusto much of her life and her late adventure in the western prairies. She shaped in passages from the bible for illustrative purposes occasionally, but most of her talk was Aimee with a big A. And the crowd ate it up. Healthy assents of amens and hallelujahs chorused her story.

LUCIFER GOT MAD.

Aimee said Lucifer got mad when she began to take his trade away from him. You see, according to Aimee, Lucifer is the special pet of the bootleggers, debtors of all sorts, sordid and unwholesome to whom vice is life.

Then they met Aimee.

Anyway, when the little singers of Los Angeles and Aimee they fell and fell hard. Pretty soon all of Lucifer's little playmates were dashing up to Aimee's Temple to be baptized by her. After Aimee gets through with her converts they can sin no more, according to Aimee.

Then is the time Aimee says Lucifer got mad.

"She has too much personality, too much power," Aimee credits Lucifer with saying. "This hypocrisy can continue no longer, she is only a woman, so we can strike her down easily. Tarnish a woman's good

FIREMAN GETS HERO MEDAL AS LIFE-SAVER

For bravery in rescuing three girls from drowning in South Boston, August 11, 1926, Private William O. Cheswell of the Boston Fire Department, son of the late Chief Cheswell, was presented with a bronze medal by the Massachusetts Humane Society at the Bristol street headquarters today.

The presentation was made by Charles P. Curtis of the standing committee of the society in the presence of Fire Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, and was pinned on the breast of Cheswell's uniform coat as he expressed his appreciation of the gift. Cheswell is attached to Ladder Company No. 3, Friend street.

The girls Cheswell rescued are Anna Zona, 14, and her sisters, Florence, 12, and Mary, 2½. The act was called to the attention of the Massachusetts Humane Society by witnesses, and a checkup made with the result that Cheswell was informed he was entitled to the organization's medal for bravery.

Anna and Florence Zona were struggling in the water after they had gone beyond their depth while bathing. Cheswell swam toward them just as they were going down for the third time. After much difficulty he held their heads above water.

While struggling with the girls their sister, Mary, came to their assistance and got beyond her depth. She clung to Cheswell and he succeeded in rescuing her after he saved her sisters.

THE WIND IT BLEW, AND BAYVILLE IS MERRY

Bayville, N. Y., Feb. 21.—Thirsty and thrifty folk of this Long Island Sound village are convinced there is something in that adage about an ill wind.

Then began the work of getting aboard and salvage until 200 kegs were secured, each containing 25 gallons.

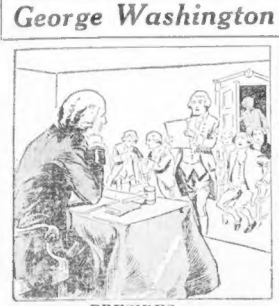
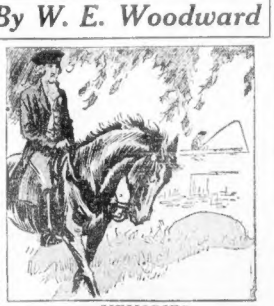
George Washington ~ Constitution Framed ~ By W. E. Woodward



PRESIDES
The difficulties of ruling the thirteen States under the existing confederation led to the calling of a convention at Philadelphia, in May, 1787. At this Federal convention Washington sat in the chair of authority and listened interestingly to the debaters.

RAPS WEALTHY
During the Convention, Charles Pinckney recommended that the President and Judges should be wealthy enough to be "independent and respectable." Benjamin Franklin rose instantly and retorted that "some of the worst rogues he knew were the richest rogues."

MORRIS AIDS
Much credit for drafting the Constitution, called by Gladstone "the most wonderful work ever struck off by the brain and purpose of man," goes to Gouverneur Morris. This "aristocratic revolutionist" was a member of the Committee on Arrangement.



MEMORIES
On one occasion Washington went on a fishing trip with Gouverneur Morris to Valley Forge. While Morris was fishing, Washington rode around the old Valley Forge encampment, then silent and haunted by memories. He mentioned the visit in his diaries.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Misses Braggiotti Dance This Week, With Miss Eugenia Frothingham Assisting; Copley Society Dance on Shrove Tuesday

SOCIETY'S KEEN INTEREST IN ITS favorite dancers will be manifest this week when the Braggiotti trio, Misses Berthe, Francesca and Gloria and a well trained troupe make their annual stage appearance at a downtown playhouse. These clever girls, personae gratae in the local smart world, count their admirers by the score and many a youthful society sprite is learning the intricacies of interpretative dance under their inspired guidance. Miss Eugenia Frothingham, daughter of the Langdon Frothinghams, makes her theatrical advent and does a dance in the cleverest of velvet costumes topped by the picturesque velvet beret. Although whenever débutante engagement like Miss Eugenia from her semi-professional appearances, her place in the troupe will be filled by her talented elder sister, Miss Ellen Frothingham. Braggiotti stage engagements always bring out smart audiences, and many parties have been planned for the present week.

IT IS THIS SAME SPRIG OF THE WORLD OF DEBUTANTES, Miss Frothingham, who is down for a duet dance specialty with Lansdon Mathews when the Copley Society does the medley of Mardi Gras and dances at Repertory Hall on Shrove Tuesday. Their Hollace Abbott, the Copley's president, will lend his dignified presence to the Pierrotesque affair as master of ceremonial, that there is an hour of divertissement and a receiving line of important matrons each item is an interesting feature of a merry evening. Harvard boys will twang away on their guitars. Miss Nancy Morison does a Russian dance, street singers, the Neapolitan sort, will strut about and warble as they stroll. And an orchestra that has delighted the Bar Harbor Summer colony will play. Altogether, Leighton Rollins and his associates in arranging the carnival have fashioned a colorful evening to precede the penitential period.

THAT TWO SUCH IMPORTANT FUNCTIONS as the Fine Arts Ball and the Cotton Ball will not occupy a divided social attention on one evening is a matter of congratulation to all concerned. What ever there was of confusion in dates has been cleared away, and the highly placed Bostonians prechristened "terrific" in both affairs may breathe easily. The Cotton Ball opens the ball-room season in full from at the Brant Statler with much eclat on April 22 and preceding by a week the Copley Society's Fine Arts ball on April 15. The costume balls following on another so closely will give wide range for imaginative invention, the Cotton Ball offering a certain simplicity of costuming material carried out in fashionable cotton fabrics, while the more Fine Arts brings out costumes that are rarely beautiful and impeccably authentic as to periodic detail or lavish and most eccentric flights of artistic genius.

DOWN AT PALM BEACH CHARLES A. MUNN is doing the host honors at the Munn villa, "Amado," on La North Ocean boulevard, in the absence of the very charmingly decorative Mrs. Munn, who sailed away earlier in the season to visit her beloved Paris. The Munns belong to the very smartest inner set at the gay Winter society capital and entertain royally at their villa that is more a real, visible and palatial home than the usual "Winter dream" of the world visible. The three Munn children, Charles, Jr., Frances and Pauline, are with their papa at the Beach, and all four go over later to join Mrs. Munn in Paris, where the Southern season shall have closed and Paris is budding forth into its own peculiar brand of springtime attractiveness.

A BRILLIANT AND INTERNATIONALLY INTERESTING FIGURE in the Southern winter's gay life is the Countess of Lauderdale. Her name appears frequently as sponsor when society gives elevation to this or more serious pursuits, and she is being much feted by Palm Beach hospitality, which, frivolity by the ounce, as it is practically every moment of the twenty-four hours. She is wearing this Winter as a costume accessory and newly acquired trinket a necklace of coral beads, much admired ornament of which she danced at a recent ball. There are but two such necklaces in the whole world, it seems, that the Countess owns and another belonging in Boston. Both are made from obsidian found on the coffin of King Tut, the whole of ancient Egyptian embassy their romantic value. The Countess is staying on in this country until March before going back to London.

THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YOUTHFUL VOICES lifted up in song, their owners togged out in native garb of various European countries, is the way Washington's Birthday celebrations takes on significance as guided by the combined Municipal League and Community Service forces in an annual holiday song festival. Spanish senoritas in voluminous swishing taffetas and the toreador hats of Castile will sing and dance, Scotch, Holland's kirtled frocks and Dutch caps and spotless muslin caps will adorn the girls who sing of the tiny Kingdom of the Dykes. Darkeyed daughters, or granddaughters, of the South, perfected in Italy's Dixie music, will clink their necklaces and twinkle their earrings to the sweet, familiar airs.

SINGERS WEARING THE WINGED HEADDRESS of Alsace and the lace cap of Lorraine, singers whose rainbow hues proclaim their Polish or Slavic origin will brighten the scene. In all, seven European countries will be represented in song and costume. Group and ensemble singers are in the plan as well as American patriotic tableaux. Important people are sponsoring the contest and there are several prizes to be awarded. The very long list of those interested includes such well known personalities as Mrs. John F. Moore, Miss Helen Paine, Mrs. Robert Walcott Bigelow, 2d, Miss Lucy Lowell, Mrs. Henry L. Mason, The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, Mrs. Robert W. Sampson, Miss Ida Mason, Mrs. Alston Burr, Mrs. Frederick T. Galacar, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d and Arthur Whiting. Symphony Hall is the place and three in the afternoon the hour.

MISS FRANCES PROCTOR OF THE SKATING CLUB, one of the talented juniors of that active set, wears for her Arena appearances a Highland Rosie's costume with its dark green and blue plaid gone into a pleated skirt, the jacket and white blouse of the Scotch miss and a tam on her yellow hair. She and Miss Babette Morison, one of the Horace Morison daughters, make an attractive duo in the rink. Miss Morison, Babette and her smaller sister, Miss Mary Morison, are devoted to their skating, and practically no session of the club goes by without them.

INVITATIONS HAVE GONE OUT from the Museum of Fine Arts for the private view on March 1 that opens the Boston Society of Arts and Crafts exhibition The Museum authorities are very happy in many new gifts, rejoicing greatly and never reasingly, of course, over the magnificent gift by Robert Treat Paine, 2d, of the El Greco. There is also much enthusiasm over the group of prints from Mrs. Edward Jackson Holmes, Miss Anna C. Hoyt, W. A. Sargent and W. G. R. Allen.

MRS. LEBARON RUSSELL BRIGGS, JR., is donor of a nineteenth century woven shawl, Bernard Weld has given medals, to the number of fifty-six, and from the estate of Mrs. Sarah Scott Binney Sardinian drawn work lace of the sixteenth century, pottery and porcelain, Italian pewter dish and Italian lamp, all of which are precious acquisitions to the Museum's wonderful collections.

800 STRIKE AT SOCIAL MILL

Organizer Riviere declared that if a settlement of the strike is not made within a reasonable time and the operatives are not guaranteed that they may resume on the union 48-hour-week basis, steps will be taken to call a general strike in all six Jenckes-Manville mills.

These mills are located, two in Woonsocket, one in Pawtucket, one in Manville, one in Georgiaville and one in North Carolina.

From unofficial sources came a hint that officials of the mill were contemplating moving the plant to Mount Caesar. This was characterized by strikers as propaganda.

However, a committee of fifty business men was immediately organized in Woonsocket to meet with company heads and attempt to persuade them to keep the mill in Woonsocket.

NOTICE POSTED.

When the more than 850 operatives reported for work at the mill today they found this notice, signed by President Jenckes, posted on the board:

"We are very sorry to be obliged to inform the operatives of the Social Mill that, inasmuch as we have apparently failed to get their cooperation in our efforts to improve operating conditions, we are obliged to discontinue operation of this mill.

"On reading the notice, practically 90 per cent. of the working force gathered their personal effects and went out on strike, adjourning to union headquarters, where a mass meeting was held and a committee of seven appointed to see the mill superintendent, Andrew Cavanaugh. Tickets were to be placed in front of the Social Mill if a settlement were not effected immediately.

Pawtucket, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The suspension policy adopted at the cotton mill in Woonsocket will not affect the principal plants of the Manville-Jenckes Company which are in Pawtucket, Prov. Frederick L. Jenckes announced today. The Pawtucket plant employs about 2,500 operatives and some of the departments have been running overtime.

Light snow tonight and cloudy skies on the holiday is the weather man's prediction for Boston and vicinity.

Besides the fresh storm coming from western New York and due tonight, there are two more storm areas heading eastward. One in the far northwest is so severe that that section is cut off from communication with the Washington central weather bureau.

Snowfall to date this winter in Boston is 58.7 inches. The record for a winter, through February, is 62 inches set in 1903-04.

SEES FAILURE IN SWEDISH RUM CONTROL

Norway, having abolished prohibition by popular vote last Fall, has created a similar agency termed "monopol" in Sweden. Sweden has had for thirteen years a system of liquor control devised by Dr. Ivan Bratt. This of no temperance, not prohibition.

The following article, written by the Prime Minister of Sweden, an ardent prohibitionist, tells how the system has worked:

By CARL EKMAN.
Prime Minister of Sweden.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 21.—The Bratt system of alcohol control does not, in my opinion, represent the "royal road to soberness" which its protagonists had desired and hoped for. The figures regarding the misuse of alcohol in Sweden do show a general decline since the new system was adopted in 1914 after prohibition was rejected.

For this reason it can be said the Bratt system has, to a certain extent, reduced the cases of flagrant and evident misuse of alcohol.

What changes may have taken place with regard to reduced working ability and lowered physical and moral standards—ill effects which accompany not only flagrant misuse, but also a moderate use of alcohol—it is impossible to say with any certainty, because of the absence of proper study and data. I believe that the effects of the Bratt system have been less favorable in this respect.

MAKES DRINK POPULAR.

The Bratt system has, without doubt, popularized the drinking of light wines and beers to an extent neither foreseen nor expected at its introduction. It has tended to establish the general opinion that the so-called moderate use of alcohol possessed a special value and benefit, advantage over total abstinence.

The number of control book owners persons who have the right to buy stated amounts of intoxicants for their own use at homel, and the legal consumption of such intoxicants has been on the increase in the last few years.

If the citizens were divided up into three groups, with the total abstainers on the one extreme, and the total abstainers on the other, it would be found that the Bratt system has reduced the numbers of the two extreme groups, but that it has increased the number in the middle group.

USE HARD LIQUOR.

One purpose of the Bratt system was to discourage the use of high-proof alcohol beverages by permitting the use of mild beers and wines, but this has been found impossible wholly to prevent illicit production of high-proof alcoholic beverages, or smuggling.

To realize the fundamental purpose of the original law entirely, that the seller of intoxicants shall know the ultimate buyer-consumer of every quantity of the purchased intoxicants, is prohibited. This prohibition is violated to an extent which threatens to make the control aimed at illusory.

The Bratt system, therefore, and as prohibition, while hard and costly fight against the unlawful trade in intoxicants. The attempt to control the purchasers cannot, obviously, be realized without great expense.

BANNED BY SPORTSMEN.

I consider, however, that the greatest weakness of the system lies in its tendency to popularize instead of rooting out the use of alcohol in any form or any degree of strength as a beverage.

Sportsmen who enter a competition with wine or beer win banned alcohol long ago.

A system which reduces the numbers of the total abstainers—and this particularly among the leading elements of all classes—has undoubtedly an asset to a people, even if that system tends to reduce, as our system undoubtedly has, the evident misuse of alcohol.

RESCUED MINERS REST AFTER CHEATING DEATH

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—After 24 hours' imprisonment behind a fall of rock and coal in the Archbald Mine, three employes of the Glen Alden Coal Company were resting at their homes today, unaffected by their experience. The miners, Michael Clayton, John Slunck and Stanley Clinko, were trapped in the underground workings when the roof of the mine caved in. Eighty feet of the gangway was filled with tons of debris.

Fortunately the men were uninjured and were plentifully supplied with lumber for timbering to prevent another cave-in. Though the mine was good and the only thing that hampered the rescued miners were empty dinner pails.

INSULL DARING JAIL IN SLUSH $40,000 DEFI

Washington, Feb. 21 (I.N.S.).—Although threatened with a possible jail sentence for alleged contempt, Samuel Insull, utility peiner of the mid-West, today renewed his defiance of the Reed Campaign Fund Committe by refusing to reveal all his contributions in the Illinois senatorial campaign last Summer.

Insull, the gray-haired, solid-appearing head of $3,500,000,000 worth of public utilities, stood by his personal attorney, Donbel P. Schapiro, in refusing to reveal the names of persons to whom he gave $40,000 last Summer in the midst of the senatorial primaries.

Their defiance was in contrast to the attitude of Robert E. Crowe, State's attorney at Chicago, who answered all questions asked him. Crowe's action purged him of contempt charges, while the committee served notice on Insull and Schapiro they would be prosecuted for contempt.

This warning did not faze the utility king or his attorney.

Schapiro said the $40,000 was given him in two $20,000 sums by Insull "for use in the local primary." He declined to say what the money or where it was spent.

Reversing his earlier defiance of senatorial authority, Crowe testified he had received $5,000 from Insull to be used in the candidacy of Adolph Pl. Sirkegi, convicted of county judge. This was the contribution which Crowe refused to reveal.

Crowe said the money was given to him by Sirmeyer.

BOARD SEEKS TO BOOM N. E. BUSINESS

By FRED TOYE

It is unfortunate that the words "publicity" and "advertising" were used in connection with the proposal made by the New England Council to the Legislative Committee on State Administration urging the appointment of an unpaid board to constitute a bureau for fostering Massachusetts industry.

This is the opinion of Major P. F. O'Keefe, one of the most active workers in the New England Council, and one of the chief sponsors of the bill.

"Although an appropriation of $75,000 a year is asked for this bureau, as a matter of fact, not one dollar of it will be spent in advertising," he said.

TO AROUSE LEADERS.

"The main purpose of the bureau will be to create a smooth running piece of machinery which will have as its function the arousing of civic consciousness on the part of business men and manufacturers in all the cities and industrial towns of the State.

"At the present time there is no central organization for the dissemination of information regarding New England's advantages to inquirers in other parts of the country. If we did start on a campaign of advertising, the total budget asked for would go only a small way.

"What we hope to do is to arouse the leaders throughout the State.

FALSE IDEA ABOUT N. E.

"It is hoped that the efforts of the Bureau will be to such good effect that leaders in our industrial centers will be moved to take up local campaigns, similar to the agitation which enabled Atlanta to raise $250,000 in five days and embark upon a campaign of nation-wide propaganda.

"There is abundant opportunity for every business man of the State to do his individual share to eradicate the false impression of New England that has been spreading during the past few years. The country as a whole has a false and warped idea of conditions here. I am making speeches all the time, going to New York and other cities at my own expense, to say my bit. Others can do the same thing. There is untold wealth here, and all we need is co-operation to place New England firmly in a place of leadership in commerce and industry alike."

U. S. HOLDS KEY TO MANAGUA

Washington, Feb. 21 (A.P.)—Without any military acknowledging any intention to interfere directly between contending Nicaraguan factions, the State and Navy departments have stated upon a line of procedure which is expected generally to insure serious existence to the Managua Government against the American-recognized government of General Diaz.

Not only have 800 American Marines and bluejackets taken over control of the vital National Railway from Managua, the capital, to Corinto, but the American Legation guard at Managua has been moved from barracks in town to Loma, the hill fort which dominates the city.

In pursuing Nicaraguan civil wars possession of this fort has carried with it control of the capital.

The official explanation of the movement of the Marines from barracks to the more residential park near to the Loma is that the U.S. desire to afford better protection to foreign lives and property."

A TOWER OF LIES.

"So," said Aimee, "the built up a tower of lies about me, like the Tower of Babel, and, like Babel, the Lord destroyed it.

"Lucifer gathered together a group of people and said Dave with me, and we will destroy this woman. You tell this and you tell that, and when all is told, she will be shut from Christianity.

"Babel was destroyed by the confusion of languages. When the people started assailing me, they told so many varied stories that none would fit together.

"So once again Lucifer lost to the Lord. He said that the people worshiped me, but you see, they didn't worship me they worshipped him."

Then the congregation rose, and, lifting their arms on high, they chanted praises to the Lord for saving Aimee from the devil's designs.

NOT ALWAYS GOD-LOVING.

But Aimee wasn't always the God-loving woman she says she is today.

Way in the past, when Aimee was a high school girl, she was subjected to worldly temptations and succumbed.

And the girl whose mother, like the biblical Hannah, had prayed to the Lord for a daughter whom she could dedicate to the Lord—the girl had been rocked to sleep with bible stories—began to read Darwin, Robert Ingersoll and Voltaire.

And doubt crept into her mind. One day she said to her mother: "How do you know there is a God, after you have let one?"

That sad condition went on for several years, in fact until the evangelist Robert Semple converted her back to Christianity and married her.

Anyway, Aimee's ideas on Darwin's theory have changed. She said: "Men may become monkeys, but a monkey will never become a man.

"The preaching of evolution is a deadly poison and is dealing an axe blow into manhood and Godliness," she went on. "If this is a free country we have as much right to keep evolution out of the schools as the Reds."

Italian Style Rice Makes a Dainty Menu Hit

WE'VE broken a record in the Martha Lee Kitchen—I'm far too modest to say I've broken a record—but the record for the most Italian Style Rice the family of the writer has consumed, I won't tell you the quantity devoured today—anyone will not permit me—but I will give you the recipe. Then you can make a record of your own—and may the most elastic tummy win.

Italian Style Rice is a substantial dish, intended as a meat substitute. It can substitute for all the rest of the fixin's of any meal so far as I'm concerned. Even a rice sandwich—lemon sherbet. Helen was serving hers no temptations for me.

I needed the sauce for rice—you'll never believe that I have an extremely active complex against just plain boiled unsugarized rice—rice hobnobbing with onions, fresh mushrooms, Italian tomatoes and a dash of grated cheese! Yowie! Just tasting it on one's tail. I'm not to defend my record.

Anyway, here's the recipe.

Italian Style Rice—Melt three tablespoons of butter, add one cupful onions, peeled and sliced, and three green peppers or pimentoes, shredded. Cook until softened, add a can of sliced mushrooms or two cupfuls of fresh mushrooms, peeled and chopped coarse, and a half can of Italian tomatoes. Cook until the mushrooms are tender, then add four cupfuls of rice, boiled or steamed, one teaspoonful salt, a little pepper and vanilla.

Serve in one-half cupful of grated cheese and serve very hot. If desired, this can be pressed down in cooked shape, frosted, iced over, then served like an omelet on a hot platter.

TO HOUSEWIVES

Helpful Hints to Use When the Business Woman Cooks Her Own Dinner

EVERY so often the business woman gets a yen to cook a real home dinner, and begins to search among her friends for victims, not to satisfy any cannibalistic craving, but to devour the finished product.

A kitchenette dinner is of necessity type all its own. There's the informality of serving that adds to rather than detracts from the charm of a party, and the guests consider it a real treat to be allowed to arrive in time to watch the play of preparations.

It really looks like a play to them as they see their hostess making all her dinner preparations without a superfluous step. But I rise to remark that anyone who thinks kitchenette cookery is play should try it on a mid-August day.

Even on a mild Winter Sunday, I live in momentary expectation of the sprinkler system playing on my unprotected head, set off by the tropic heat furnished by my oven.

But to get back to our dinner—and it's not mutton—a three and one-half pound porterhouse roast of beef that is the first cut of rib roast) makes a luscious company roast.

Have it rolled and tied and wipe it off with a clean damp cloth and place on a roasting rack turned-over) with skin side up.

The oven should be preheated for ten minutes so that it is piping hot. The meat should be turned once during the first fifteen minutes, then dredged with flour, salted and peppered and basted with the fat that has melted out.

Then the gas flame is turned down and the roast allowed to cook slowly. One and one-half hours in all is required and every ten or fifteen minutes the roast should be basted and then dredged with flour. No water is added at all, as it completely changes the flavor of a roast and coaxes the delicious juices out of the meat. Frequent basting prevents burning.

Scalloped potatoes, celery, string bean salad, tiny hot biscuits, angel cake and coffee complete a meal the kitchenette cook can well afford to view with satisfaction.

Here's a recipe for an angel cake calling for only five egg whites:

ANGEL CAKE—One-half cupful egg whites (about five eggs), one-half cupful sugar, one-quarter teaspoon cream tartar, four tablespoons wheat flour, four tablespoons potato flour, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract.

Beat the egg whites until light, add cream of tartar and beat until dry. Sift both sugar and flour five times and fold in the sugar first and then the flour with a spoon. Add the vanilla and pour into the small-tube pan, and bake forty minutes in a moderately slow oven.

The cake should rise, but not brown, during the first fifteen minutes and is ready to come from the oven as soon as it begins to shrink from the edge of the pan.

Turn upside down on a wire rack and let it hang from the pan for at least half an hour. Remove from the pan and dust with powdered sugar or frost with white icing.

Some time when you are thinking that there is nothing new under the crust in pies, and mentally jarring the time-honored virtues of apple versus custard, try a lemon sponge pie and listen to the paeans of pie praise arise from your grateful family.

From the telephone calls and letters requesting the recipe for this master-dessert—well, no methinks it is rapidly coming into its own. Even our photographer-in-chief has long been asking when we are going to take an illustrated recipe of a lemon sponge pie—bipping. I know, in secret heart, to fall heir to the exhibit.

So here we have it for you today in all its glory—honest-to-goodness lemon sponge pie with a rich undercrust and a delicious spongy, self-forming upper crust.

LEMON SPONGE PIE—Cream together one tablespoon butter and one cup sugar. Add four teaspoons of flour. Add the yolks of two eggs and stir well. Then add one-half teaspoon of grated lemon rind, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and one cup of milk. Fold in the lightly beaten whites of the eggs and bake in one crust.

This is lemon pie reduced to the lowest term of effort, for it requires no previous cooking of pastry or custard or second oven-browning of meringue. Folding the whites of the eggs into the custard is the secret of the self-forming topping, and oh how delicious am the grand total!

Pass the Apples Again

DIGGING into medical archives, it's a surprise to find that "an apple a day keeps the doctor away" is no new notion. It's been pretty an old English folklore branch record, which probably came over in the first great merryan, the Mayflower.

There's no question but what custom knew what it was about when it established apples, baked, or raw as an opening gun, in the winter menu. Apple juice is a very good stomach wash—quite as important in the fresh and mouth wash. Omment even claims that cider might ill be served for breakfast in the and beaten as orange juice.

When you've made the mistake of doing more than is good for you, ad your tummy wiggles signals of distress, limit your sup or to one pple and next morning you'll find ou rejoicing in your wisdom.

Apples contain dozen-by vitamins nd bulk. They are filling and leg ng an alkali-producing food, net as balance for the over-abundance of ood-souring foods which form the bin part of most Winter diets.

Let it time to pass the apples main?

If there is a small member of the family whose diet requires a daily ttle pulp, it is a concentrated nsense to light a gas stove for this no article name. Try plasing the pulp on an asbestos mat over the ommer flame for three-quarters of an hour, covered, of course, with a ucepan. Then put through a puree ain and little fuel expense. In fact, several potatoes, enough for a small ouple, may be baked this way.

Rule to Follow in Buying Is Given for Investors

By B. C. FORBES.

TWO and two make four.

Wall Street apparently is figuring, or at least hoping that two and two will make five or six.

That is what is suggested by the extraordinary bidding up of various railway stocks when are mentioned in connection with possible or probable mergers. Two blacks do not make a white—not even the combining of one black and one white makes a white.

B. C. Forbes

You Wall Street is acting as if all you had to do to make a poor road a moneymaker is to add to it another railroad.

ALL of which is to sound a warning against paying fancy prices for second rate rails rumored as headed for a combination.

Too high prices can be paid even for the strongest railway stocks. Remember that it does not necessarily swell the profits of a system when there is added to it an expensive cost, a road earning little or nothing.

Remember, also, that even were the talked mergers to go through the resulting systems, at least in the East, would not be freed from all competition.

* * *

THE income yield on the principal railway stocks at today's quotations, is not high. It is not.

And sometime or other the pendulum will change. It is more likely to change through a reversion of prices to normal levels than through an abnormal increase in profits and a sudden enthusiasm in dividend payments.

* * *

JUST how far has the advance in rails been carried?

In some cases the rise has exceeded one hundred per cent. In others the gains have ranged around 25 to 50 or more points.

This table gives the low quotations for various railway stocks last year, the high prices touched this year, and the extreme advances:

	Low	High	Pts.
Atch., Top. & Santa Fe	122	172	50
Atlantic Coast Line	125	175	50
Baltimore & Ohio	83	131	48
Canadian Pacific	143	205	62
Chicago, R. I. & Pac.	49	75	26
Chicago, Mil. & St. Paul	30	50	20
Del., Lack. & Hudson	128	194	66
Lehigh Valley	64	104	40
Missouri Pacific	37	54	17
N. Y. Central	125	180	55
N. Y., Chi. & St. L.	100	142	42
N. Y., N. H. & H.	33	53	20
Northern Pacific	85	127	42
Pennsylvania	50	72	22
Pere Marquette	77	112	35
Reading	82	131	49
Union Pacific	141	197	56
Wabash	21	41	20
Western Maryland	31	57	26
Wheeling & Lake Erie	15	30	15

*Also par value.

* * *

By no means everybody is clamoring for them and pushing the quotations to extreme heights. We are told almost daily that rails have not soared to new high prices for this year, for last year, or many years.

"We have entered an old-fashioned bull rail market," Wall Street brokers declare. Apparently we have.

But don't forget that bull markets, whether old-fashioned or new-fashioned, have a habit of ending—of ending rather suddenly as a rule. And those who climbed for stocks then find themselves saddled either with losses or with what the Street calls "involuntary investments."

For, all except gamblers and speculators who devote close daily attention to the stock market the best, the safest rule is to avoid paying prices not justified by the dividend yield or by definite prospects. By following this rule you will, as a matter much if your stocks do go down a bit, so long as your reasons for buying them remain sound.

This reminder strikes the writer as timely. Those who follow it may be sometimes called fogies for a time, but they will also miss serious speculative losses.

RAILWAY wages steadily lend upwards, and I fear that freight rates will steadily trend downwards," a level-headed railway president remarked the other day. He added, "We will doubtless go on effecting economies, but there isn't now as much room for improvement as there was in the past."

BUSINESS throughout the country is moving along as per reasonable expectations.

(Copyright, 1927, by B. C. Forbes.)

ACTIVE TRADE IS FORECAST AT HARVARD

Active trade is the forecast at Harvard for the first half of this year.

Harvard Economic Service in its weekly review says:

"The mixed conditions which still obtain in commodity markets, together with the decline in the liquid indices of business, suggest that the end of last month, subsequent to the period of inventory, at least until the stimulus of the spring trade is felt.

"But under this uncertainty, we believe that the readjustment now taking effecting certain industries will prove to an end. Commodity prices have advanced in its efficient economies which are on a good basis and interest rates abroad have been declining from the abnormally high levels necessitated by economic readjustment.

"Finally, money market conditions in this country are favorable to active business, and the easing of interest rates following the turn of the year coupled with the very substantial decline of commercial borrowings indicates a generally liquid condition of commercial credits.

"Already, the easy money conditions have stimulated the issue of considerable amounts of new securities, and the proceeds of these are destined to be expended for goods and services during the coming months."

"We believe, therefore, that business will proceed actively and in substantial volume during this half-year."

U. S. WEALTH ALMOST PAST RECKONING

By FRANK H. MELSON,
Financial Editor.

Every little while someone repeats the old saw about the end of the world, the future of the United States, or something else. Usually the sensational reason why you shouldn't invest money is based on the theory that it is now time to get rid of it, because the end is near. Sometimes it is based on the theory that it is now time to get rid of it, because the end is near. Sometimes it is based on the theory that it is now time to get rid of it, because the end is near.

The HOLLYWOOD GIRL

by BEATRICE BURTON
Author of "The LOVE WRECKER"

Adventures of a Girl From New England in the Movie Colony

She read all the movie magazines. It was an enchanted land to her.

CHAPTER 1

SHE was not always of Hollywood. She was born right here in the very town of Dedham in a white house that stands on Walnut street behind a neat hedge and a square of green grass. And she lived there for twenty-two years before she ever set foot in Hollywood—that city of stars and studios!

Her name was Roberta Ruth Ransom, and Bobbie for short.

That is, her father called her Bobbie, and so did Andrew Jerrold, who was in love with her.

To the girls and boys of the first reader room at school she was known as "Sir, Teacher" and "Miss Ransom."

It was sarcastic Aunt Gertrude who nicknamed her "the Hollywood girl." For, though you would never have guessed it to look at her, Bobbie was movie-struck.

She was. She was one of the thousands and thousands of girls all over this broad country—from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon—who are wildly eager to break into the movies.

There never was a week when she did not go at least twice to a moving picture show.

There was never a single motion picture magazine that she missed. She read them all from cover to cover.

She could tell you off-hand what year John Gilbert was born, why Marion Davies bobbed her hair, and that the real name of Mary Pickford is Gladys Smith Fairbanks.

She was the prettiest thing on earth—a brown-eyed blond. When you looked at her, she made you think of lovely gold-colored things—sunrise roses, dahlias, and Black-eyed Susans. And she had beauty with a capital B.

Now, beauty can be a great curse as well as a great blessing—and for that very reason the story of a woman with beauty is usually more thrilling than the story of a plain Jane.

And, furthermore, if a beautiful woman has ambition as well as good looks—Ah, then, she has a story worth the telling.

Robbie Ransom had both beauty and ambition—that drove her like a whip, and so that is the kind of story she had.

And this is the story.

* * *

It was on a hot Saturday afternoon that Bobbie finally made up her mind that she simply would NOT go back to teaching school in September.

Instead of that she would take her courage in both hands and go to Hollywood to "break into" the movies by some hook or crook.

"It's now or never!" she said passionately to her Aunt Gertrude, who had always been like a mother to her. "I just will make the break this fall. I won't stay here any longer and die on the vine.

"I never did want to teach school, to begin with," she declared. "Ever since I was old enough to think I've just been dying to go out to Hollywood and try my luck—and now I'm going, by Jinks!"

"What are you going to use for railroad fare, buttons?" asked the sarcastic Aunt Gertrude.

Aunt Gertrude had heard Bobbie rave about breaking into moving pictures before. Moreover, she knew that Bobbie did not have half enough money put away to risk leaving home to go to Hollywood or any other place.

For Bobbie was the soul of extravagance. She seldom saved a penny.

"The trouble is that I like nice things," she often explained to Aunt Gertrude, when that sensible spinster was telling.

EDUCATION TO CHECK DOPE EVIL

Atty. A. C. Webber Heralds Drive Throughout the U. S. to Curb Use of Narcotics

A timely warning to the people of New England against the menace of "dope," one of the country's greatest problems, was voiced today for former Assistant District Attorney A. C. Webber of Suffolk County in recognition of this week as Narcotic Education Week.

Throughout America this week a campaign is being waged to conquer the drug evil, under the guidance of the World Conference on Narcotic Education, of which Richmond Pearson Hobson is president.

"The only hope of solving this problem, one terrible menace of 'dope,' is to educate the public to build up a strong resistance to its slavery," declared Attorney Webber.

During his years of service in the district attorney's office Attorney Webber waged war against drug addicts and drug pedlars, and he drew up the present narcotic laws while he was a member of the commission appointed by Governor McCall in 1916.

He has devoted much of his time since leaving office in 1919 in warning the owners of those drug addicts who appeared before him for criminal offenses.

"With not one exception, every man or woman drug addict that I have ever talked with would give anything they own or ever expected to own to be rid of the terrible slavery of dope," he said.

"Curiosity to know the feeling that narcotics produce is the cause for the most of the men addicts' starting while most of the women users began by taking drugs to alleviate the pain of sickness.

"Morphine sulphate is used far more than cocaine, codine or heroin in Boston.

"Many of the morphine users were brought into court charged with picking pockets while users of cocaine were often connected with a greater crime whereby they took desperate chances and even displayed great bravery in their criminal act.

"I believe that the manufacturers of cocaine should be wiped out entirely as it has no legitimate use[illegible]

JOBS AND PAY IN SMALL DROP

Decreases in employment and earnings in January as compared with the previous month are noted by the State department of labor and industries from data compiled from 1,963 identical establishments throughout the State.

The number of employed fell off seventenths of 1 per cent, and the aggregate payroll decreased 2.3 per cent, and the average weekly earnings per person 1.7 per cent.

A summary of the two months shows:

	No. wage-earners employed	Aggregate weekly wages	Average weekly earnings
January, 1927	281,000	$7,500,705	$26.70
Dec., 1926	283,306	7,905,812	27.92
Am. of dec.	1,306	2,3	1.2

Of the leading industries, the report reveals, the principal changes occurred in the manufactures of boots and shoes, in which the total payroll showed an increase of 9.5 per cent. Employed gained 6.6 per cent.

A strike of clearmakers in Boston and a general curtailment throughout the trade[illegible] about a decreased [illegible] 856 employes in Decem[illegible]ber to 220 in January, and a reduction in the average weekly earnings of $9.27. Seasonal curtailment in the manufacturing of stoves and [illegible] accounted for a reduction in employes of 25 per cent.

Calls Sentence to Death Barbarous

The bill before the Legislature, calling for abolition of capital punishment by the State, has as one of its staunchest supporters John J. Cummings, prominent Boston attorney and former candidate for Lieutenant-governor. Read what he has to say:

By JOHN J. CUMMINGS.

Man, who is incapable of rendering infallible judgment, is taking upon himself the privilege of the Divine Being when he sends to the death chair or the scaffold a man or woman.

Capital punishment smacks of the barbarian code of 1726. It is inhuman. It is not a deterrent to crime and the country should awaken and have the statute torn from its books.

The only arguments advanced by those who favor the retention of the law that begets to death or breaks the neck of a man, is that it is a deterrent to crime and their reliance upon the Biblical passage, "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," FAILS TO CURB CRIME.

Is the fear of the death penalty a deterrent to crime? Absolutely not, in my opinion. Capital punishment has not cut down the number of homicides, the truth being that in the States where there capital punishment has been abolished the number of homicide cases is lower.

Persons who commit murder are not thinking of the electric chair. There are very few cold-blooded murders—murders which are planned and carried out according to schedule.

What right has man in sending to his death the type of human being and what good does it do? Does it prevent other insane or temporarily insane persons from committing murder?

Aside from the argument that the majority of murderers are insane [illegible] becomes the only way to eliminate crimes of violent type, payroll and bank holdups and the like, is by the suppression by civilization, not by taxpayers.

"EYE FOR AN EYE"

"An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," carried with it a literal sense. It is as literal as the Biblical passage which states that the rich man has as much chance of reaching Heaven as a camel has going through the eye of a needle. This is purely no sound reason in favor of the death penalty.

It might be well to recall the words of Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing, who said: "When Massachusetts stopped burning witches it [illegible] stopped having witches."

TEMPLARS PLAN CELEBRATION

Other even than the organization under whose jurisdiction it is, Boston Commandery Knights Templars will celebrate the 125th anniversary on March 12 in the Hub.

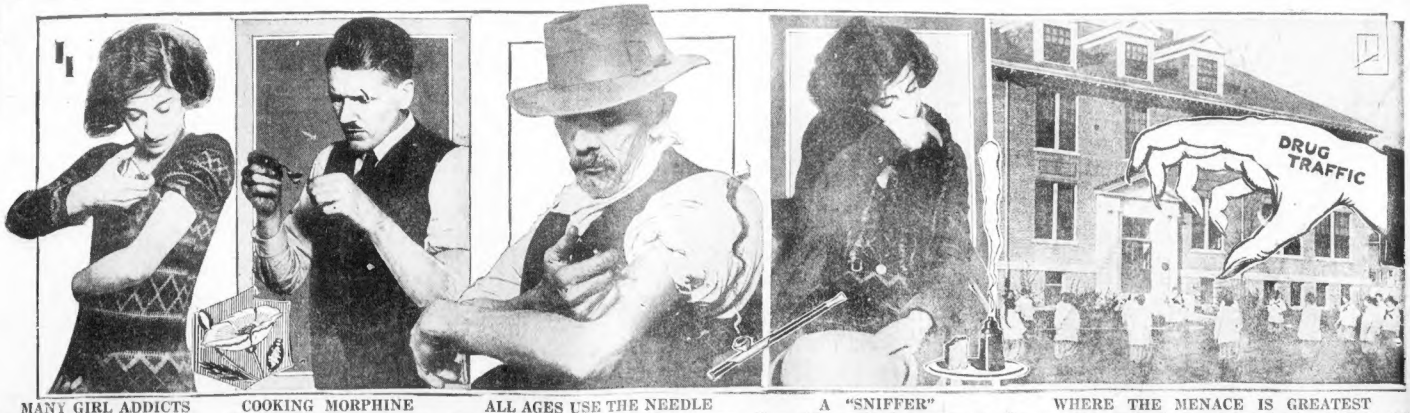
Present plans call for an official inspection at one of the State armories, with [illegible] assembly, full uniformed, from each of the fifteen commanderies in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, participating.

The inspection ground, made up of [illegible] men each, will mean a drilling body of more than 1,300, arrayed in the brilliant regalia of the order.

The Boston Commandery was started in 1802 when ten Knights of the Red Cross met in Masons' Hall at the Green Dragon Tavern. Various [illegible] affiliated themselves with [illegible] and from 1809 until 1816, as a [illegible] the Order of Knights Templars was worked in the Royal Arch Lodge. March 13, 1802, the Knights Templars Boston, established the Boston Commandery, which has never been discontinued.

During the 125 years that the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the governing body, has been in existence, Boston Commandery has furnished nineteen grand commanders.

Great Menace of Drugs ~ Is Stressed As Narcotic ~ Education Week Opens



MANY GIRL ADDICTS
There are more women narcotic users than men in Boston, says Attorney A. C. Webber, who has studied the drug evil for years.

COOKING MORPHINE
This addict is cooking morphine on a small spoon. Morphine sulphate is more popular with Boston addicts than other drugs.

ALL AGES USE THE NEEDLE
Curosity to know the feeling narcotics give causes men to take to dope, Attorney Webber says, while women find it a way to alleviate the pains of sickness.
For Story See Page 9

A "SNIFFER"
Many addicts satisfy their craving by sniffing heroin, but this form of dope taking is little used in Boston in the opinion of Mr. Webber.

WHERE THE MENACE IS GREATEST
It is among high school and college students that those in charge of the war on narcotics are devoting most of their attention. Special emphasis is being made in all schools this week of the dangers in the use of all narcotics and boys and girls are warned of pedlars' methods.

KUMMER PLAY IN FILM DRESS AT THE 'MET'

Familiar situations in new guise stud the realm of "Louie's Greatest Mistake," the film of which Sidney Kum[illegible] is the author. It is the Metropolitan Frederic Arnold Kummer, playwright, is responsible for the film. It has been directed, and the featured people are Conway Tearle and Dorothy Brent, with William Powell, James Hall and Josephine Dunn. Thanks to Mr. Kummer, the photoplay opens [illegible] apologizing for the director has enlivened the whole with many clever touches.

Joseph[illegible] Dunn

The real star of the production is no less a person than Frank Morgan, the fellow who has been around the stage in "The Firebrand" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Where the other principals, for the most part, merely strike through their roles, Morgan accepts the character gratefully, never becoming heavily villainous, never allowing his role to lapse into the burlesque class. His readiest rival in this film is William Powell, whose natural gifts brought him advancement over other recent productions. Together, the two supply all the wholesome of the current drama, together they save it again and again from falling into the mire of melodramatic dross.

Edward Sutherland, once upon a time assistant director to Charlie Chaplin, has handled "Louie's Greatest Mistake" with commendable discretion. Where the actors would seem to drag, he speeds it on its way with pungent little twists of direction, both in the matter of the actual scene of the latest scandalies of the plot. James Hall has the role of a very ordinary boob. Miss Brent heads the array of feminine interest. Alice Day, who has been "minor star," Iris Gray, see[illegible] her more or less ably.

The stage this week is given over to James Morrison's production of "Venetian Glass," which boasts a dazzling curtain and an array of talent that includes many pleasing specialties. Other noteworthy acts are Ethel Sweeney, wizard of the mandolin, and Hubert and Wing who wargle popular melodies.

RATTLING THE SKELETON IN 'THE RED MILL'

ALAS, POOR YORICK!

While engaged in her latest film venture at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios Marion Davies makes no bones about inspection of "props." The gentleman is George Hill, director of "Tell It to the Marines" which starts today at Loew's State.

ROD LA ROCQUE IN TWIN BILLS

Rod LaRocque turns buccaneer in a modern pirate story, "The Cruise of the Jasper B," which is the feature of the first half of this week at the Modern-Beacon. The story is by Jack Boyle, well known for his work in the movies, and has many unusual and exciting scenes. Rod LaRocque has the role of a young man who, with his partners, goes in search of adventure and finds it in a manner that is more than exciting. Alice Joyce is the leading woman.

Rod LaRocque

Rin-Tin-Tin, famous dog star, is also appearing this week at the Modern-Beacon. The picture is "While London Sleeps," and the human players in this feature are Lowell Sherman and Dorothy Revier. Rin-Tin-Tin is an American villain in the story. The production is said to be unusually good, with a love affair between the dog and his faithful dog friend.

SMART FILMS AT FENWAY

Elinor Glyn's psychological "It" provides Clara Bow with her first starring film, now on view at the Fenway.

"It" is the series of adventures of a fetching little shop girl who seizes the last one of the feminine arts to work herself in the world and conquer a wealthy husband. There are scenes of smartness in effective cases, realistic in a department store and farcical romance, viewed a rakish yacht as a finale.

Antonio Moreno plays opposite the star and, thereby, increases his popularity. Another good work of the production is by William Austin in the role of an English comic. In the author herself appears [illegible] as all may see and admire.

For the most till one of the James Boys is a matter of opinion, but the scenes is nice seen. Olive Borden and Edgar Grahy have the featured roles.

The police made several charges in an attempt to clear the area and about twenty persons were injured.

Later a group of discontented patrons, vexed over the calling off of the match, set fire to the stadium. The blaze was put out before much damage was done.

More absorbent—
Discards like tissue

By Elwyn J. Buckland
Registered Nurse

FEW women today cling to the old-time "sanitary pad"—risker and un[illegible] because of a new way called KOTEX.

It ends the embarrassment of [illegible] and [illegible] of wearing Kotex as easily as tissue.

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads. Thus you wear fewer pads and pay fewer visits under the most trying conditions.

Also deodorizes, and that ends all fear of offending. So better than cotton that use it. Doctors widely urge it. Most hospitals employ it.

Costs only a few cents for a package of 12 at any drug or department store. Be sure you get the genuine KOTEX, for only Kotex itself is Kotex.

Quaint Customs of Turkey

In the interior parts of Turkey many quaint customs are still in practice in spite of the modernizing influences that have been introduced. In case of a death the town crier still goes through the streets announcing the news through the streets.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

A PACIFIC coast philanthropist has had it during school days and before with weeds, so built a home for hopeless cannabis. It's a sort of a lovers nook a stone's throw over yonder and heave in spots.

THE eating meal the vegetarian was below and a man can't make the beef with any of them.

ONE fellow has gotten so much confidence from movie stunts that he now walks up to his wife without knocking.

HE went home the other evening and phoned he had to work late, thought of her, but she didn't let him. Maybe because she didn't want to keep the groceries waiting.

SHE sit him with three permissions and didn't even bother to read them out of the side.

THE ornament started over both ear. He had told someone that he was the boss at home and it got back to her.

HE had a mind of his own but couldn't get a chance to use it.

HE was a very bright man, but his brains were in her name.

SHE'S been married nineteen years and never had a quarrel.

EVERY her husband's right, she won't admit it. She doesn't want to give her sex a bad name.

SHE'S so used to shouting that she can't stop talk in normal voice nothing can be accomplished.

SHE had a nervous breakdown. Remembered she'd forgotten to let me see the bill. Call her echo.

ONE woman she considered a friend she often dropped in to call on, but left the coffee hated to be interrupted.

SHE was such a bore and so tiresome that when she died on the front steps no flags were at half what him was displayed.

SHE was put monkey in a perfumery attitude.

BUT he never criticize. He meekly let them be themselves.

HIS friends and him alone you must call a man henpecked because he's married.

SOONER or later the woman found to turn out to be an ex-boss of, since she will come along and grab him. Dewey, 1927, King Features Syn., Inc.

BACON'S REASONING

Columbus was wrong this day covering America, by the false reasoning of Roger Bacon, who thought the globe was only a small ocean between Europe and Eastern Asia.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A MARRIED WOMAN---BY HELEN ROWLAND

AFTER a lovers quarrel a man's first thought is "How can I get away"—a woman's, "How can I get him back?"

* * *

The whole world, to that will training wall is contained in one line of that beautiful classic, "Let's Be Pals."

"LEAVE 'EM ALONE—and they'll come home!"

* * *

The hardest thing on earth for a woman to do is to leave anything alone—particularly a man!

* * *

She must DO something. She must write him an apology. She must call him up and "explain." She must insult a rival in his face.

She must beg his pardon. She must tell him what she thinks. She must get him BACK.

* * *

At ten p. m. a woman will send a man away "forever" in a fit of righteous wrath—and at ten o'clock next morning, she will be on the wire begging him to come back.

* * *

At midnight she will hand him his ring and his soggy—and the following noon she will strive to appease him with a box of candy.

* * *

She will furiously vow never to speak to him again—and within four hours later try to get him on the 'phone so that they may have it all over.

* * *

Nothing so wearies and disgusts a man as these morning-after explanations, reactions and apologies. When a man wakes up with a horrible headache, the memory of champagne makes him sick—and mental hangover, usually consists of more sentiment than sense.

* * *

If a man does tell you a woman is nothing on earth will bring him back to her side—he means it. Unless coupled

* * *

If man himself says a woman is nothing on earth will keep him away from her except death or jail.

* * *

A real lover cannot be LOST—he can only be temporarily mislaid.

* * *

Watchful waiting is sometimes a good suggestion. But sometimes the only thing she can say is the only thing she can say—and that is NOTHING.

* * *

Nothing so stirs a woman's dead ashes. Even so small a thing as a letter will bring them to life—and cause them to flame into a fire that will consume her

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but a State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

1,000,000 Drug-Takers

"Am I My Brother's Keeper?"

This last week in February has been designated by the World Conference on Narcotic Education as Narcotic Education Week.

The president of the Conference is Richmond Pearson Hobson, who in 1898—before the great majority of the drug-takers of today were born—distinguished himself by his daring in sinking the collier Merrimac across the entrance to Santiago Harbor, for the purpose of preventing the exit of Cervera's fleet.

This means YOU do not use habit-forming drugs, and believe you KNOW none of your friends is an addict—a point on which it is possible to be mistaken—you MAY think yourself "not interested" in narcotic education.

But YOU ARE, as a matter of fact, very much interested.

There are, in the United States, according to the Treasury Department, ONE MILLION addicts.

Among them are the burglars, the hold-up men, most of the pickpockets, the "new" criminals who are performing all about us.

It used to be thought that the majority acquired the drug habit as a result of doctors prescribing narcotics in cases of great physical pain. The fact is said to be that the larger part begin taking a drug because of its pleasurable effect.

A young man who has worked hard all day takes a hurry-up supper, togs out in style and goes with his best girl to a dance. All in, an hour after midnight, he observes that his boy friends appear to be as fresh as ever. In an ante-room, one of these chaps produces a vial of heroin from his pocket and says, "Take a snuff of this; it will brighten you up in no time."

The young man IS brightened up. His sleepy feeling is gone. In the morning, perhaps, before going to work, he takes ANOTHER dose.

Such a young man was entered upon the Road to Ruin—physical, mental, moral. Needing the drug, lacking opportunity to get it or being without the money with which to buy it, he is likely to resort to crime.

You BEGIN to use the drug most innocently; little by little its meshes are woven about you. A craving is created. To quit is untold misery; to continue is CERTAIN DEATH.

Narcotic Education Week will prove helpful to all of us; the plea, "Am I my brother's keeper?" was outlawed six thousand years ago, or more.

Prohibition in Norway

It Doesn't Work So VERY Well Here

"DRY NORWAY." THIS CARTOON HELPED TO KILL PROHIBITION IN NORWAY

Details in this cartoon, printed and distributed in Norway, where they recently put an end to prohibition, remind you of conditions in New York and elsewhere.

On the right you see earnest prohibition gentlemen, and above them a still, busy turning out bootleg whiskey. Farther on a man is reeling along with a bottle and another is hanging himself to a tree. In the foreground gentlemen are behaving themselves alcoholically. Elsewhere you see a bootlegger truck in the ditch scattering casks, hijackers holding up a bootleg wagon, and far back on the water bootlegger boats, pursued with bullets.

A recent vote in Norway put an end to prohibition. Ivar Lykke, Norway's Prime Minister, said prohibition made things worse than they EVER had been.

Here many think prohibition a failure, because everything alcoholic is forbidden, even the mild and comparatively harmless wine and beer, along with the whiskey.

In Norway whiskey was forbidden, wine and beer were permitted. And, nevertheless, there was bootlegging and drunkenness.

The wine and beer law, however, in Norway omitted the "light." You could buy as much as you wanted of heavy intoxicating port wine, carrying as much as 16 per cent. of alcohol, enough to make anybody drunk in five minutes. Norway drank a good deal of THAT.

The common sense plan would be really to forbid the sale of drinks that rapidly make men drunk, anything containing an excessive amount of alcohol, whether it be called whiskey or wine, very heavy ale or anything else.

Hundreds of millions, for hundreds of years, have drunk light wine and beer without drunkenness.

The Volstead law could be changed. But legislators are afraid of ardent prohibitionists. They know that the man who would like his beer will philosophize and drink bad whiskey if necessary. But the real prohibitionist will not forgive the lawmaker that votes for anything except THEORETICAL ice water only.

This picture of prohibition in Norway is reproduced from Collier's Weekly.

DO NOT FEAR BEING TOO GREAT

By DR. FRANK CRANE

DON'T be afraid of your generous emotions. The worst fear is the fear to be too great. The meanest satisfaction is to be content in being like others.

If you trust a friend, trust him unto death. Of course, you may be deceived in him. But better be humiliated by betrayal than be incapable of perfect faith.

If you love your wife, love loyally, utterly. She may not appreciate it. But better be unappreciated than to miss the joy of perfect self-giving.

Don't be afraid of casting your pearls before swine. Better that than to hoard your pearls. And Jesus, who said it, did cast His pearls before many swine.

Don't be afraid to forgive. The object of your forgiveness may be unworthy, but that cannot mar the fineness of your pardon. Don't be afraid to show yourself friendly, for only so you show yourself worth friendship.

Don't be afraid to believe in goodness. Better that evil should come as a shock than that you should have trusted in it.

Don't be afraid of being too kind. "In this world," says Marivaux, "one must be a little too kind to be kind enough."

Ape-Man and Dawn-Man

By Garrett P. Serviss.

WHETHER man began as "dawn-man," as Professor Osborn thinks, or as "apeman," in accordance with the opinion of Professor Gregory and others, the main result is the same, for in either case man appears as the product of a process of evolution and not of special creation.

On the other hand, the dawnman hypothesis does not bring us a jot nearer to explaining the secret of man's beginning, nor tell us how, where, and when he obtained his superior brain. The earliest fossils that anybody ventures to call human show an astonishingly high brain capacity, at least according to the rules by which that capacity is estimated.

The old Neanderthal caveman, who was a plain brute, could show a brain of 1,339 cubic centimeters capacity, against the 1,450 cubic centimeters of the average living Europeans.

The upper Paleolithic broadheads of Ofnet beat the modern broadheads of Czechoslovakia by 1,400 cubic centimeters against 1,230.

The "Trinil man" (Pithecanthropus) and the "Piltdown man" had as much brain capacity as the modern Indian Veddahs.

A Cro-Magnon caveman of Mentone beat Daniel Webster in the size of his brain.

It certainly looks as though the secret of intellect cannot be confined to mere brain size. But there are no means of ascertaining the weight of the brains that the cavemen carried. Wherefore the conclusions drawn from the psychiatrist charts that have been made of the dawn-man's brain may be a little rose-colored.

However, the earliest man could not have been a fool, whether he inhabited a tree or a hole in the ground.

The ape and the monkey climb with their hands, as anybody can see by visiting a menagerie. But man climbs with his legs, as every birdy-nestifig boy demonstrates. Whence the dawn-man theory infers that early man never lived in trees.

For a psychic proof it might cite the fact that there is deeply implanted in the human nervous system a dread of height. The nerves of the great majority of men and women are shaken and a chill runs through their spines if they find themselves on the edge of a precipice, or if they look steeply down from a high elevation.

It requires practice and resolution to enable a person untrained in such things to climb among the branches of a tree and look down through their interstices upon the ground below. There are many who are completely unnerved by such an experience.

They grow pale and tremble, begging to be helped down. And this dread and aversion appears to be inborn, as if it were an inheritance from remote ancestral tendencies. It certainly doesn't suggest an arboreal cradle for mankind.

Still the question recurs: If man was a "ground animal" from the beginning, how did he get the start that set him off so completely from the other ground animals? No answer, beyond vague conjectures.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

RAIL LEADER LAWYER

VICE-PRESIDENT E. G. BUCKLAND of the New Haven wound up 1926 by putting across the plan for his railroad to spend a million in rehabilitating the Springfield Street Railway. His proof in 1927 is to have the interest on the New Haven's debt to the U. S. government reduced. Comparatively few people, since he does not "hang out a shingle," are aware MR. BUCKLAND is a lawyer as well as a railroad man.

ALL TRAFFIC EXPERTS

CHAIRMAN THOMAS J. HURLEY of the Boston Street Commission tells the writer he gets many suggestions on regulation of traffic. A large majority of the writers are apparently traffic experts. "They all think they know how to do it better than the commissioners," he states, "and we offer no denials."

HARMONY

The appointment by MAYOR NICHOLS of the Board of Street Commissioners to be members of his new traffic advisory board makes the latter board an official one. Heretofore the street commission held aloof from taking any part in the proceedings of the advisory board. The action of the Mayor cements the two groups in harmony. There seemed to be a divided opinion as to the duties of the newly created board and its deliberations before the Mayor took action.

TURTLE DOVE

Forest street, Roxbury, is the only one of its kind in that section. It sets on a site where LAFAYETTE drank to the health of the growing Republic on his second visit to America from France, in 1824, prior to participating in the exercises attending the laying of the cornerstone of BUNKER HILL MONUMENT, Charlestown. The cottage is owned by J. FRANK HONEN, HONEBEN druggist.

CONGRATULATIONS

R. D. V. EDWARDS who recently became general agent of the United States Lines, was with the Cunard Steamship Company 27 years. Since taking up his new position he has received hundreds of congratulations. The first steamship of the United States Line to arrive in BOSTON since MR. EDWARDS assumed command here was "The Republic."

ANOTHER TEST.

"The experiment of HERMAN C. LYTHGOE, director of the Pure Food and Drugs Division of Massachusetts State Department of Health, in turning new pennies into "dimes" by dipping them in hair tonic containing mercury, reminds me of one they used to spring at hearings on whiskey bills previous to prohibition," said former STATE SENATOR JAMES F. CAVANAGH. "Opponents of whiskey used to take a piece of raw beef, pour whiskey on it and then say, 'See what it does to the raw beef, gentlemen; that's what it does to the human

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DR. HERBERT D. CURTIS is an astronomer. Dr. Mayo is a surgeon. Mr. Edison is an inventor.

These three men are famous scientists. They know all that can be known about the stars, they know the body and the machines which serve that body. They know about strange and wonderful things, about energy and matter and time and space.

We admire such knowledge. We are proud that the human race possesses it. We boast a great deal about the "scientific advancement of the last one hundred and fifty years."

Yet with all our boasting, science has left us feeling a little empty—a little lonely and cold.

It didn't tell us the thing we wanted most to know when our health failed and our dreams were shattered and old age fell upon us. It didn't answer the old, old question, "WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?"

Wanted the Answer.

We wanted that question answered. It made all the difference in the world. If we went somewhere from here—if life didn't stop when our bodies snapped — then everything we suffered was worth while. Then it paid to be unselfish and honest and humble and kind. Pain didn't matter much, nor failure nor poverty — if there was another life to live.

Science told us things about this life, but it didn't tell us about that other life.

The religious men tried to tell us. They talked in terms of faith and hope and God's undying love. There was comfort in that, but still we wanted something more. We wanted PROOF. We wanted to be SURE that two and two made four.

And now, at last, the wise men are beginning to see that we are on the verge of that SURETY. They have followed the trail of life from the tiniest atom to the farthest star, from the quivering pulse in a bit of slime to the love of man for a woman—and always the trail went on and on and on. AND NOW, AT LAST, THEY SEE NO REASON WHY THAT TRAIL SHOULD STOP WITH DEATH.

Logical Proof.

"We have found," says Dr. Curtis and Dr. Mayo and Mr. Edison, "that matter does not stop nor energy nor time, nor space. Those four great facts of life do not stop, and they cannot be destroyed. THEN WHY SHOULD THE SPIRIT OF MAN BE AN EXCEPTION TO THIS RULE WHICH GOVERNS ALL OTHER CREATED THINGS? We believe that it isn't an exception, and that before long science will be able to prove more and more clearly, that the soul does not die, but lives and grows after death, as it does before."

Think of that as you wonder what it is all about. Think how much more wonderful life will seem when we KNOW that it doesn't stop.
